

Course	Student Learning Outcomes	Method(s) of Assessment
Library Technology
LIB 100 F Introduction to Research	After successful completion of LIB 100 F Introduction to Research, the student will be able to construct an effective search strategy to locate information on a particular subject.	The successful student will be able to document the strategies designed and employed to find relevant information on a particular subject in a research file.
	After successful completion of LIB 100 F Introduction to Research, the student will be able to evaluate and determine the validity of websites using appropriate criteria.	The successful student will be able to write or present an evaluation of a web resource using criteria including accuracy, authority, purpose and currency.
	After successful completion of LIB 100 F Introduction to Research, the student will be able to compile a bibliography of relevant print and online resources on a given topic.	The successful student will be able to create a list of cited sources in MLA or APA format.
LIB 100HF Honors Introduction to Research	After successful completion of LIB 100 HF Honors Introduction to Research, the student will be able to construct and implement an effective search strategy to locate information on a particular subject.	The successful student will be able to document the strategies designed and employed to find relevant information on a particular subject in a research file and reflective essay.
	After successful completion of LIB 100 HF Honors Introduction to Research, the student will be able to evaluate and determine the validity of websites using appropriate criteria.	The successful student will be able to evaluate a web resource in a written essay and class presentation, applying criteria discussed in class.
	After successful completion of LIB 100 HF Honors Introduction to Research, the student will be able to compile a bibliography of relevant print and online resources on a given topic.	The successful student will be able to create an annotated list of cited sources in MLA or APA format.